Chaos to Control: Leadership Through Crisis

Following the keynote presentation "Mindset Over Mayhem", delegates are invited to take part in an exclusive CPD accredited immersive leadership workshop designed to turn battlefield leadership principles into practical tools for corporate crisis management.

In today's business environment, organisations face increasingly complex and fast-moving threats - from cyber-attacks and operational disruption to reputational crises and leadership paralysis under pressure. The ability to respond effectively is no longer simply about procedures or policies; it is about leadership mindset, decision-making and adaptability in uncertainty.

This highly interactive CPD accredited workshop explores how leaders can move from chaos to control during moments of extreme pressure.

Using real-world operational experiences alongside modern leadership theory, the session introduces delegates to Professor Keith Grint's leadership framework of Wicked, Tame and Critical problems - a powerful model used to identify the nature of a crisis and determine the leadership approach required to resolve it.

Delegates Will Learn How To:

- Identify whether a crisis is Wicked, Tame or Critical
- Understand why different crises require different leadership styles
- Recognise when command, collaboration or management is most effective
- Make clearer decisions under pressure
- Lead teams confidently during uncertainty and disruption
- Apply battlefield leadership principles to modern corporate environments
- Develop practical tools that can be immediately implemented in their organisation

The workshop complements the keynote by moving beyond inspiration into practical application, giving attendees a structured framework they can use when facing real organisational crises such as cyber-attacks, operational failures or high-pressure strategic challenges.

Combining immersive storytelling, operational insight and practical leadership development, this session offers delegates a unique opportunity to experience leadership thinking drawn from environments where decision-making truly matters.

Be prepared not just to survive crisis - but to lead through it.
